In 1593 Edward Moreton of Engleton sold to Lewis Dickenson the messuage and tenements then in his occupation. (fn. 67) In 1650 a Lewis Dickenson, Margaret his wife and Lewis Dickenson his son, a minor, settled what was described as a manor of ACTON TRUSSELL and BEDNALL, the capital messuage called the Moat and various lands. (fn. 68) On his marriage in 1655 the estate was settled on Lewis Dickenson the younger for life with remainder to Jane his wife for life. (fn. 69) Settlements were made in 1674 by Lewis and Jane on their son Lewis and Elizabeth his wife (fn. 70) and in 1718 on Lewis, son of Lewis and Elizabeth, on his marriage to Mary, daughter of Edward Ward of Stafford. (fn. 71) Edward, eldest son and heir of Lewis and Mary, (fn. 72) was dead by 1753 (fn. 73) when his sister Mary and her husband Thomas Spicer were in possession of the manor. (fn. 74) By his will, dated 1767, Thomas Spicer devised the manor to his wife Mary who, by her will of 1776, left it to her nephew Edward Dickenson, son of Lewis Dickenson, her younger brother, (fn. 75) but after her death it was sold by her trustees in 1778 to John Barlow. (fn. 76) John Barlow, by his will dated 1804, left the Moat House, the so-called manor and all his lands in trust to his grandson John Barlow, son of his son John, deceased, (fn. 77) who came of age in 1818 (fn. 78) and in 1819 sold them to Edward John Littleton of Teddesley, retaining, however, the rights of common. (fn. 79)
